

What is TIG?

TIG is an innovative model which offers school personnel a variety of intensive training opportunities, resources and ongoing technical support to help students cope with trauma, violence, illness, death and grief in the school setting.

School professionals are trained and prepared to transform educational practice, inform school policy and procedure, as well as to implement effective crisis plans. Within a region, TIG Teams are linked to one another for support as well as with the other resources of the Consortium.

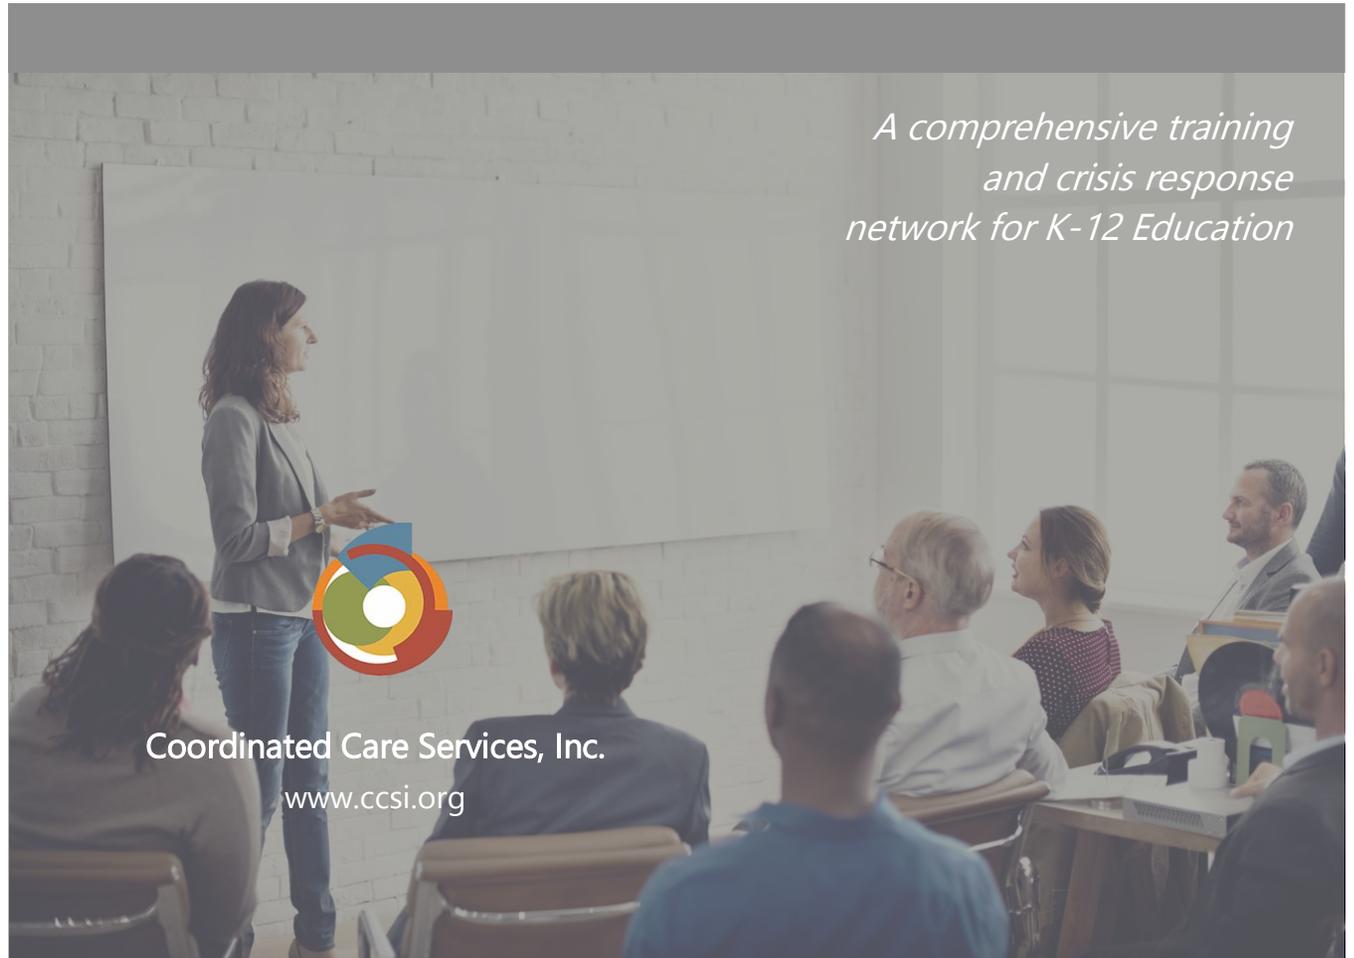

If you're interested in establishing TIG in your region or district, please contact us to set up a consultation call.

Who We Are

CCSI's Practice Transformation team is comprised of training professionals and support staff who are dedicated to helping individuals and organizations expand their trauma-informed care knowledge base and practice capacities.

TIG Mission

To grow and maintain a community and school based consortium of culturally sensitive and clinically appropriate training, support, and resource services to assist schools in responding to the emotional needs of students, teachers, administrators and other school personnel which arise from trauma, violence, illness, grief and loss.

Core Curriculum

This 7 Module Training Series is offered over five days. Structured to be responsive to a school calendar, all topics are presented through an educational lens. Each module is specifically designed to inform educational practice regardless of the role of the school professional. Districts identify TIG Teams to attend training together, building consistency in implementation and accelerating practice change.

Training

- Grief & Loss at School
- Trauma
- Suicide Risk & Intervention in Youth and Adolescents
- Chronic & Acute Illness
- School Violence: Intervention & Prevention
- TIG Implementation
- Critical Incident Stress Management

Philosophy

School is a primary resource for students offering continuity, safety, information, and support for their growth and success. Many young people turn to trusted teachers or other school professionals for support and help in understanding challenging events in their lives.

School personnel, especially teachers, are often a frontline resource for students experiencing trauma, illness, death and loss - both at the time of immediate crisis and in subsequent years, as they continue to adapt and mature. By being knowledgeable and informed, school professionals are prepared to respond and intervene effectively during these times of crisis and to support resiliency.

At times a crisis will occur that will impact large numbers of students, or even a whole district. It is at these times the back-up support network through TIG is initiated, allowing TIG-Trained staff from other districts to provide support to impacted students, colleagues, and communities.
